Call for Papers
Belief, Curiosity, Knowledge and Cognition
(Croatia, Trogir, 28-29 August 2015)

Proposals may address any topic related to the questions below from a variety of historical, philosophical, theological and/or contextual perspectives.

Belief and Cognition - Faith and Reason - Knowledge and Testimony - Philosophy of Cognition - Is acting a form of knowing or is knowing a form of acting? - Faith and Evidence - What is the relationship between curiosity and knowledge? - Religious Epistemology - Is practical knowledge relevant to self-knowledge? - Is belief in God rational? - What are the similarities and differences between practical and theoretical knowledge?

Presenters will have thirty minutes to present their research with a fifteen minute question and answer period to follow. Those interested should submit a proposal that includes:

- Title of presentation
- A paper abstract approximately 250-300 words in length, which includes the problem your scholarship engages, and the contribution you plan to make
- On a separate page, please include: presenter's name, institution or professional affiliation, and contact information

All proposals should be submitted through email attachment (entitled: Application for the Trogir 2015 conference) by 20th of January 2015 to: regens@dominikanci.hr. We will confirm receipt of all proposals submitted by email and alert potential participants of the decision by 20th of February 2015. Once proposals have been accepted, the registration fee will be 200 euros and will cover the costs of the conference, accommodation and the preparation of an e-book of the papers given during the conference.

This postgraduate conference will take place within the 'Study Week-Trogir' for undergraduate students entitled 'Human Curiosity and Knowledge and Christ's Acquired Knowledge' which represents an independent project of the Croatian Dominican Province which will be held from 23rd to 30th of August 2015.
